Money and Mental Health
Fall 2021 Workshop for Students
Financial stress can be a comfort or a stressor depending on circumstances. When there is enough money, life can be just fine; when there isn’t enough money, stress can result and affect thinking and function by consuming our thoughts and creating ongoing worry. Tight student budgets can sometimes make this financial/cognitive overload a stressful problem. Mental strategies and practical school plans to avoid that money-worry spiral are important to limit anxiety and free up mental space for study.

When & Where
Wednesday, September 29
1:30-3:00 PM
Via Zoom

What You’ll Learn:
- Mental strategies and practical action plans
- How to manage anxiety about finances
- Look after your well-being

NO CHARGE!
RSVP: studentcounseling@unm.edu
Deadline to Register: 1 Business Day Before Workshop
